LATE CITY FINAL

Hamptons Diary

RANDY SCHINDLER, the ousted owner of Hamptons magazine, spent the night in jail after partying with the Parrotheads at Sunday night's Jimmy Buffett concert at Southampton College.

He was busted for DWI by a state trooper as he exited the sold-out benefit in his 2003 Audi station wagon.

At his arraignment in Southampton Town Justice Court yesterday, it was revealed that Schindler, 48, refused to let the trooper give him a breath test — which, under state law, meant automatic revocation of his driver's license.

Schindler was charged with DWI and two counts of possession of a controlled substance, all misdemeanors, and released on his own recognizance.

The controlled substance? Sources identified it as 1½ tablets of the anti-anxiety drug Xanax.

Sag Harbor lawyer Ed Burke Jr., of Lizzie Grubman fame, was in court representing Schindler. He said his client "maintains he's innocent of these charges and looks forward to a vigorous defense." He's due back in court Sept. 8.

sleeved blouse, pivoted on her heel and scooped up a two-pack of French's yellow from the grocery aisle.

"Yes you do!" she said, holding up the mustard victoriously.

When Swank was told she would have to buy a whole bottle, she balked at paying $1.39 for a single use. "I don't live here," she explained.

Told she could have honey mustard or Dijon, Swank finally answered brightly, "I won't be having any mustard today!"

Howard Stern and actress girlfriend Beth Ostrosky were spotted stocking up on gourmet goodies at Citarella's in East Hampton over the weekend.

Ostrosky briefly interrupted the buying spree to take a closer look at the photo of Joan Rivers on the cover of The Hampton Sheet.

"I can't believe it — Joan Rivers looks younger than me," gasped 30-year-old Ostrosky
