

NEW YORK POST

LATE CITY FINAL

Monday, September 1, 2003

Hamptons

Diary

IT WAS heartbreak for First Daughter Georgina Bloomberg, who lost out in the jumping competition with her horse Riviera at the Hampton Classic yesterday.

The 20-year-old daughter of Mayor Bloomberg was one of 29 riders shooting for a prize — but didn't make the cut of five finalists after failing to make three clean jumps.

BLOOMBERG

Still, Hizzoner was very proud of his kid, who enters NYU as a freshman this month.

"You've got to be in it to win it," he told Diary.

The mayor, who bought two tables at the Classic, was among many luminaries at the East End's last big event of the season, sponsored by Prudential Financial.

Also in attendance were Rudy Giuliani, Donna Karan, James Burrows and Lorraine Bracco. One glaring no-show was Martha Stewart.

The winner of the jumping competition was McLain Ward of upstate Brewster, who took home $45,000 and a trophy presented by Giuliani.

It's usually shorts and sandals in the Hamptons — so why do the big-wigs insist on being so formal?

At Jean-Luc East Saturday night, the movers and shakers included Schools Chancellor Joel Klein, New Yorker editor David Remnick, Cantor Fitzgerald CEO Howard Lutnick and Manhattan restaurateur Bobby Flay.

Klein was dining with literary superagents Mort and Linda Janklow, when Jean-Luc owner Ed Kleefeld came by for a relaxed chat with the education boss.

Linda only half-joking told Ed that he should refer to Klein as "chancellor."

The same evening, fotog Joan Jedell, publisher of the Hampton Sheet, bumped into Rudy Giuliani and his wife, Judi, at the Palm.

FLAY

When she said "Hello, Judi," Jedell was promptly corrected by Mrs. Rudy.

"It's Judith," Judi said, according to Jedell, who says America's Mayor told her he was just back from a seven-day, eight-city speaking tour of Australia.

Next >>